

Employee Spotlight: Mike Lechefsky

At Big Horn Armory, every rifle that reaches a customer's hands has passed through a careful process of inspection, packaging, and compliance. One of the people ensuring that the process runs smoothly is Mike Lechefsky, who manages shipping, receiving, and incoming firearm transfers for the company.

Keeping the Wheels Turning

Mike serves as BHA's Shipping and Receiving Specialist, overseeing the flow of firearms and components coming into and leaving the shop. His responsibilities include preparing outgoing orders, managing incoming shipments, and handling the FFL transfer process for firearms arriving and departing the facility, a critical step in ensuring compliance and smooth delivery for dealers and customers.

Before joining Big Horn Armory, Mike built a strong background in warehouse shipping and receiving management, along with experience in production and sales roles.

His logistics experience made him a natural fit for the operational side of BHA's growing business.

Finding Firearms in Wyoming

Mike's entry into the firearms world came after relocating to Wyoming, hardly an uncommon story in a state where shooting sports and hunting are part of everyday culture.

His very first firearm was a 20-gauge single-shot shotgun, a classic and practical starting point for many shooters.

A Workplace Built on Team

Mike has been part of the Big Horn Armory team for nearly two years, and when asked what he enjoys most about working here, his answer is simple: the people.

He describes the BHA crew as friendly, easy to get along with, and supportive, creating a work environment that makes coming to the shop every day enjoyable.

Favorite Rifle in the Lineup

When it comes to Big Horn Armory rifles, Mike has a clear favorite: the Model 89 Black Thunder. For him, it stands out simply for its striking appearance; proof that sometimes a firearm just has that undeniable presence.

Life Outside the Shop

When Mike isn't making sure rifles get safely to their destinations, he enjoys a wide range of activities, including karaoke, hiking, kayaking, and traveling. One of his favorite escapes is visiting ocean beaches, a nice contrast to Wyoming's wide-open landscapes.

At Big Horn Armory, craftsmanship gets most of the spotlight—but it's the dedicated team behind the scenes that ensures every rifle arrives where it needs to go. Mike's work keeps the logistical side of BHA running smoothly, helping deliver big-bore performance to shooters across the country.
